

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An electrically driven brake device includes a plurality of brake actuators for generating braking force when driven electrically, a power supply source for storing electric energy and supplying power to the brake actuators, a power source line for connecting the power supply source and the brake actuators, and a power breaker at a position of the power source line at which the brake actuators can be insulated and separated into at least two systems.